Embedding Risk across teams

Creating a risk management plan is an important step in enterprise risk management. However, it is really only the tip of the iceberg. Creating a risk aware culture is an entirely different proposition requiring a range of tools and mechanisms to embed risk culture across diverse teams with disparate interests and needs.

David Howie of KPMG will present on risk and resilience and discuss how to move beyond the risk register to embed a risk culture. He will cover topics such as:

- Connecting staff and leaders with their role in managing strategic risks to Council
- How to call out behaviour beyond the risk appetite
- The strategic value of good risk appetite statements to inform good decision making, managing EM expectations and supporting investment of resources in the highest priority areas
- Where risk should sit on meeting agendas, business cases, Council decision papers
- Educating your teams on risk management in a BAU context
- Optimal resource allocation using the risk register
- Providing regular opportunity for risks to be articulated in plain English understood by your staff and stakeholders
- Avoiding making risk an industry segregated from your BAU
- Uplifting risk awareness on Committees
- How deep into the Council should risk registers permeate?

Dave is the Lead Partner of KPMG Queensland's Risk Advisory line of business, providing a range of advisory services across both the public and private sector in Queensland, Northern Territory, Tasmania, Ireland and PNG.

CEO perspective: Andrew Chesterman, CEO of Redland City Council, will join the webinar to discuss lessons in risk management and also to talk more broadly about the role of a CEO. Andrew will be available for discussion with the group, allowing Directors/General Managers to ask questions and seek feedback in an informal setting.
